SHORT BIO

Angela Box was born in Oklahoma City to a family of fierce and independent thinkers. She moved to Los Angeles after college to pursue acting, but her heart always lay with politics. She later became an elementary school teacher and in 2009, moved to Houston to work as an educator. In September 2014 she returned to her love of politics as a contributor to the late-night cable access show "Tommy's Garage" which unwittingly turned her into a media target. Instead of capitulating to the mob, she fought back – and was one of the very first people the left tried to "cancel" – even appearing in the Daily Mail three times (so far). Since leaving teaching, Angela now does what she was made to do – wreck and humiliate leftists. For several years, she worked with a political consultant helping to elect great conservative candidates and is also treasurer the Texas state GPAC Save Texas Now and federal PAC A Stronger Texas Fund. She is a frequent contributor to Fox 26's Isiah Factor Uncensored and occasionally Fox Faceoff, paired with Quanell X (who she sued for defamation, and that's a whole other story). Angela continues to host the podcast Angela's Soap Box which can be heard weekly on Apple, Spotify, and iHeartRadio in addition to maintaining video platforms on Rumble, Bitchute, YouTube, and, most recently, TikTok. Some of Angela's past guests include Kash Patel, Lara Logan, Rep. Louis Gohmert, Arizona Senate candidate Blake Masters, Dr. Stella Immanuel, and Turning Point USA's Morgonn McMichael.

Badge of honor: Angela has been deplatformed on every major social media platform multiple times but continues to move forward.
